

Education of the Heart for a Whole Society

Dr. Claudio Naranjo

At SAHARA, 2110 Ashby Avenue at Shattuck, Berkeley 94705
Sunday, June 13th, 2010 / 6:45–8:30 p.m.

Presentation by Dr. Naranjo, followed by light refreshment during Q & A regarding the central role of an education of the human heart in the healing transformation of our patriarchal society.

FREE ADMISSION

This inspiring presentation is offered to all interested educators free of charge at the end of a long and challenging school year in honor of your tremendously dedicated service.

While traditional education emphasizes mostly the sciences, intellect, and increasingly the acquisition of information rather than real knowledge, what the world seems to need is an education of the heart for the full development of the true potential of each human being.

This talk will elaborate themes of human evolution and consciousness, transformation, and above all love: love for self, compassionate love, and sublime love. Let us imagine a world that is healthy and integrated, transformed through an education of our human capacity to love. Let us imagine how such a world would feel — and acknowledge that the role liberated educators can have in the creation of such a world is critical.

Dr. Claudio Naranjo is an activist for an educational revolution. The Chilean-born psychiatrist, consciousness pioneer, and developer of the first descriptions of the Enneagram character types now applies over 40 years of transformational work with individuals and groups to the realm of education for the healing and development of our collective psyches.
